Thirty-Eighth Ordinary Session

Consideration of Reports submitted by States Parties under the Terms of Article 62 of the African Charter on Human and Peoples’ Rights

Concluding Observations and Recommendations on the First Periodic Report of the Republic of South Africa

I- Introduction

1. The Republic of South Africa (South Africa) is a State Party to the African Charter on Human and Peoples’ Rights (the African Charter) having ratified it on 9 July 1996.

2. The present Concluding Observations follow from the presentation and examination of the First Periodic Report of the Republic of South Africa.

3. The Report was submitted to the Secretariat of the African Commission on Human and Peoples’ Rights on 14 May 2005 and was examined at the 38th Ordinary Session of the African Commission on Human and Peoples’ Rights (the African Commission or the Commission) held in Banjul, The Gambia, from 21 November to 5 December 2005.

4. The Report was presented to the African Commission by Honourable Mrs. Bridget Mbandla, Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development of South Africa, and Head of Delegation of South Africa to the 38th Ordinary Session of the African Commission.

5. The present Concluding Observations give an account of the positive aspects identified in the Report. These Concluding Observations also include a list of issues for which the African Commission requests additional information and outlines areas of concerns drawn from the contents of the Report and information provided during the presentation of the Report. The Concluding Observations further provide recommendations formulated after the dialogue that ensued from the presentation of the Report.

II - Positive Aspects

The African Commission:

6. Appreciates the presence of a high-ranking Delegation directly involved in the implementation of the African Charter which allowed for a fuller assessment of the State Party’s compliance with its obligations under the African Charter;

7. Further appreciates the quality of the Report of South Africa;

8. Also appreciates the constructive, open and frank dialogue it had with the Delegation of South Africa and welcomes the positive reactions to the suggestions and recommendations made during the discussion;

9. Appreciates the additional information provided by the Delegation during the examination of the Report, and further appreciates the answers to its questions and the undertaking made by the Delegation to provide the African Commission, at a later stage, with answers to those questions for which additional information was not readily available;

10. Welcomes the ratification of the Protocol to the African Charter on Human and Peoples’ Rights on the Rights of Women;

12. Also welcomes the establishment in 2003 of the Commission for the Promotion and Protection of the Rights of Cultural, Religious and Linguistic Communities mentioned in the State’s Initial Report as one of the Institutions supporting Democracy in the country;
13. Appreciates the fact that most of the reformative draft legislations mentioned in the Report have now been passed as a law;

14. Notes that South Africa is one of the few African countries to develop a National Action Plan and Strategy for the promotion and protection of Human Rights in 1998 and a National Action Plan to Combat Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance following the World Conference on Racism in 2001. The African Commission also welcomes the setting up of a National Consultative Forum on Human Rights (NCFHR) responsible for coordinating all human rights issues in the country with the Ministry for Justice and Constitutional Development as a convener;

15. Also appreciates the fact that South Africa is one of the few African countries that provides for justiciable socio-economic rights in its constitution and in spite of its limited resources it has taken some steps to ensure the realization of these rights. The African Commission welcomes the decision to provide free Anti-Retroviral drugs to HIV positive pregnant women;

16. Notes with interest the fact that South Africa guarantees more rights than those guaranteed in the African Charter, including for example, the right to sports and leisure; and

17. Further welcomes the use of the African Charter by South Africa in its bilateral as well as multi-lateral relations, including on issues of negotiations.

III - Areas of Concern

While recognizing the efforts of the Government of South Africa to promote and protect human rights and to create awareness on the principles and provisions of the African Charter, the African Commission remains concerned:

18. By the fact that the report was submitted almost four years after it was prepared making most of the information and statistics therein outdated during the time of examination by the African Commission;

19. With the lack of involvement of various state institutions involved in the promotion and protection of civil, political and socio-economic rights, and of civil society participation in the preparation of the Report. The Commission notes in this regard that reports required under Article 62 of the African Charter should be shared with all sectors of the society to give them an opportunity to contribute in its preparation or to react thereto;

20. That in some sections of the Report, the State Party simply provides a general description of the provisions of the African Charter and the legislation and/or policy put in place, without indicating how these measures have contributed in enhancing the rights of the persons under its jurisdiction;

21. With the lack of details on the measures taken by the State Party to eradicate the phenomenon of xenophobia directed towards African migrants in particular;

22. At the high incidence of sexual violence against women and children; and

23. That professional groups; children, parents, and the public at large, are generally not sufficiently aware of the African Charter and the African Commission.

IV – Matters for Follow-Up from the Report

24. The African Commission welcomes the undertaking made by the Delegation of South Africa to furnish it with additional information and updated statistics on issues the Commission sought further clarification. These include among others the following issues – Family matters, HIV/AIDS, Sexual offences, Child Justice and others:
